

A 501 (c) (3) – type charitable organization sets up an investment fund for its donors. The donor receives annual income distributions for life, and the charity receives the remaining interest as well as the invested principle at the donor's death. The donor also receives an income tax deduction.